

IMAGINING TOMORROW: ALTERNATE ENERGY FUTURES

An Education and Outreach Opportunity for Clean and Renewable Energy

Imagining Tomorrow: Alternate Energy Futures™, is an innovative and effective program about clean energy that is running for the second year in Massachusetts, in partnership with the Northeast Sustainable Energy Association, with major funding from the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative and additional funding from the Genzyme Corporation.

From the 2006 Awards Reception:

Left: Mary Essary, program director, congratulates Amanda Bennett from Sunderland and at thirteen, the youngest author in the top ten. Above: Finalists from across the state. Right: Massachusetts State Representative J. James Marzilli, Jr., with Emily Allen and Paul Jaffee, both Arlington High School Students, and Paul's mother, Emily Rankin.

The program takes the form of a creative writing and video contest that motivates students to consider the implications of our current energy technologies and policies, as well as explore the many solutions that exist, bringing higher visibility to isolated pilot or demonstration projects.

Now we are expanding to make this a national program - But We Need Your Help to Do This!

OUR WORLD IS IN A RACE AGAINST TIME—OUR GOAL IS TO HELP WIN THAT RACE

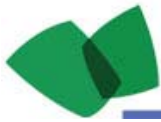

BY:

- Reaching, Involving, and Motivating High-School Students: Our Next Generation Of Voters, Consumers, Investors, And Active Citizens,
- Linking the Work of Existing Individual Programs, Organizations and Events into a "Tipping Point" of Awareness by the General Public,
- And Creating an Educated, Urgent, and Sustained Demand for Change.
